Self-help minor shelter repair pilot project completed in Deraa camp (supported by UN Habitat)

UNRWA completed the project supported by UN-HABITAT in response to the emergency needs of Palestine refugees residing in Dera'a camp, aimed at improving the quality of living and services through targeted minor repairs of shelters and the maintenance of education installations and community infrastructures.

For the first time since the beginning of crisis in Syria, UNRWA has launched a pilot minor shelter repair intervention using self-help approach, aimed at ensuring ownership of beneficiaries on the project implementation and providing increased employment opportunities for community members. The activity targeted 193 families, whose houses were damaged during the conflict and in need of minor repairs such as fixing of doors/windows, plastering, tiling, conducting electrical work, plumbing, and minor repairs to walls and structures. Out of the 193 vulnerable families selected to participate in the pilot, 63 were headed by an older person, 73 were families with persons with disabilities, 33 were female-headed households, while 24 included other vulnerable beneficiaries.

The average budget allocated per household amounted to US$2,256. Selected families were directly responsible for managing the repairs, from purchase of materials to hiring of daily workers. In order to receive the subsequent installments through bank transfer, families had to demonstrate that they completed at least 75 per cent of the previous stage and respected the allocated budget and rules, as per the contract signed with beneficiaries for this purpose. Throughout the process, UNRWA site engineers closely monitored the activities conducting quality control and providing technical support to families.
